

Los Angeles does not YET have the beer reputation of Portland, Denver or San Diego but Sean Inman and the Beer Search Party are trying to change that. Neighborhood by neighborhood.

Echo Park

Just north of downtown and near Dodger stadium is the Echo Park community and quite the beer hub it has become. Here are (4) spots to savor a pint.

Our first destination is housed in a former movie palace that had sat empty for years. Now it is the large but still homey 2nd Tony Yanow led beer project after Tony's Darts Away in Burbank and Golden Road Brewery in Atwater Village. Multiple section to sit in and a massive beer list that focuses on California craft beer with a featured out-of-state brewery each month.

Suggested Beer to try – TAPS Cream Ale is a great exemplar of a seldom seen style.

Bottle shop and taps all in one. From the folks behind the Colorado Wine Company in Eagle Rock, this corner spot in a strip mall on Sunset has an excellent bottle selection and great Friday night Brewery events .

Suggested Beer to try – If you are there on a Friday, get a draft of the featured brewery. Otherwise go for a local like Eagle Rock Brewery.

Small bar that also has wine that has a great dark vibe in a part of L.A. that seldom venture to. Great music as well.

Suggested Beer to try – With only (4) taps, it won't take long to decide.

Beer, snacks and records at this pretty little spot inbetween Mohawk Bend and Sunset Beer. Love the vibe and the tap list is always interesting.

Suggested Beer to try – a rotating tap list but since you have probably had enough California beers, you might look to foreign shores here.
